

Application Name: MockStock

Team Name: The Buffs of Wallstreet (101-1)

Team members: Jack Blackburn , Hampton Walker, Sage Long , Mirna Masri , Nick Spooner, Jon Gordon

Deployment Link: Mockstock

Project Description:

Mockstock is a free trading app that allows users to invest in the real-time stock market with no risk involved. The user is given an unlimited amount of money and can buy/sell stocks at their will. Users build their stock portfolio to keep a watchlist of potential stocks to invest in. As there is no real money involved, the app is completely risk-free and allows anyone with an interest in the stock market to get started investing.

Our app features account creation, a search page to search for the current stock prices, a trades page to buy/sell stocks and keep track of the user's portfolio, and a news page that allows users to look at recent stock market news. Possible future implementations include the ability to add friends and compete with each other, seeing who can gain the most profit with a limited starting amount of money.

Contributions:

Jon:

Made the Trade and Profile html pages and some basic CSS elements such as showing/hiding the form in the trade page and the background images. However, most of the CSS design was handled by Hampton and Mirna. Did all the functionality for both html pages in JavaScript which included a form in the trade page and the dynamic table in the Profile page.

Additionally, worked on integrating our simple database for both the trade and profile pages. This includes writing SQL scripts and then working with node.js to populate the table in the profile page and to handle the get/post requests for the trade and profile pages. Features include: user can buy/sell fake stocks, user can view profile page with positions.

Jack Blackburn:

I contributed to the project by working on the user login page and attempting to create the flow that would allow the database to check and see if a user existed or if their password was correct. I made the html page entirely but was unable to actually connect the database to my page, I struggled with the Javascript and ajax calls and was never able to get it fully working with our original idea. I also contributed by helping with each milestone and working on our presentation slides. I didn't have many commits to our repo after I created the html page because I wasn't ever able to get what I was doing to work. My page was used in our final deployment but wasn't functioning on the backend the way we wanted.

Hampton Walker:

Created news page in its entirety (html, css, javascript + ajax calls), responsible for most of the css, assisted for beginning of stock api calls, created mock test database + designed database, basic front-end bug testing. I was not able to implement all features that I wanted to due to api limitations (searching for articles by category), but I got most of everything working that I wanted to.

Mirna Masri:

Created the homePage and team page, worked on transferring all pages from .html into .ejs, and created a partials file that contains (footer.ejs, header.ejs and menu.ejs). Created a server.ejs page to have localhost and live host. Deploy the website to heroku.com, also I linked the app to Heroku Postgres (PostgreSQL-crystal). Worked with Jon on deploying the Postgres (PostgreSQL-crystal) on heroku, and got it to work as it intended to.

Sage Long:

Created Register Page, and the unused Login/Register Home Page. Contributed ideas such as the “competitive mode” feature, which turned out to be a bit over-ambitious for our experience and time constraints. Was able to convert the .html pages that I made to .ejs, and was able to deploy them on heroku. As far as the functionality of these pages goes, I struggled with setting up a working database using SQL for these pages, but was able to implement password verification and other small things via JavaScript, and a couple of “get” calls via nodeJS used to deploy these pages to the server. Below is a list of my commits on this project:

Nick Spooner:

Researched and implemented various API functions into the website, created a Search page to search stocks on the market and display their profile/stock data. Used ajax calls to the API to grab stock data, Javascript to send data to the webpage, and html/ejs to display the data and allow daily stock data to be implemented in our design.

Spent a portion of the time testing the API calls and data using client-side Node.js. Before implementing ajax calls into the program, I used Node.js to pull the stock data from the website with require() functions. This allowed us to test the API calls and store stock data from hundreds of tickers in JSON files that were ultimately not used but helped understand the APIs better.
